Meet “Mr. Bones”

With our roots as an authentic New York pharmacy, Kiehl's Since 1851 has long and rich scientific traditions in chemistry, pharmacology and medical research, and thus, a profound respect for the medical community. For many years, and to this day, an actual human skeleton has been on display at our flagship store in New York's East Village neighborhood. The skeleton was often used during consultations between our pharmacists and their patrons to help educate on and demonstrate the causes and effects of various ailments – and how our remedies would address them.

It is in the tradition of individualized service and a tribute to the medical community that we present a skeleton, “Mr. Bones,” in each of our stores worldwide today. We assure you that while Mr. Bones is an anatomically correct replica of a human skeletal system, he is not comprised of actual human bones (much to his chagrin).
