BOOT CAMP UNIFORM INSPECTION

The confining conditions of shipboard life has always required crewmen to use every inch of available space to stow their personal effects. This exhibit demonstrates how recruits were taught to fold, roll and tie their uniforms in preparation for storage in their lockers prior to the 1970s when personal storage facilities were expanded. Each item was placed in a particular location on the recruit's bunk. Following inspection and checking for proper markings by the recruit's company commander, the recruit stored his gear in his locker. This training helped the new recruit prepare himself for the cramped conditions aboard ship.

My Darling Wife:

Hello Darling its another Sunday and all I have is time on my hands, but I'll try and put it to a good purpose, and that's writing you a letter. This will be kind of hard as news is very scarce, but I'll do my best.

To start with here a little information, I don't know how true it is, but it does seem kind of logic to me. The doc is that we will be anchored in Hampton Roads on the 10th of March. And the ship will unload in preparation for going into the Navy Yard. If that is the purpose. I guess the planes will be flown ashore. I hope that its to Orono as I would rather be there than at the main base. I guess they will keep the men on board to help unload, but I imagine they will let the chiefs come ashore. I hope so. So Darling we only have five to eight days between us, after that there won't be anything between and us, if its may be. I don't mean that we have to wait for us to be together again. I hope we do a lot for us to be together. I only hope that we do a lot of operating the rest of the time, as the last week we have been pretty fast. That's because I have been and I don't have much time to think, but I don't
